A new model for substance awareness

To : White Ribbon Sisters

Please accept my greeting in the name of the Lord. I pray that your physical and spiritual health remain strong in the Lord.

Here is some helpful information for our precious sisters.

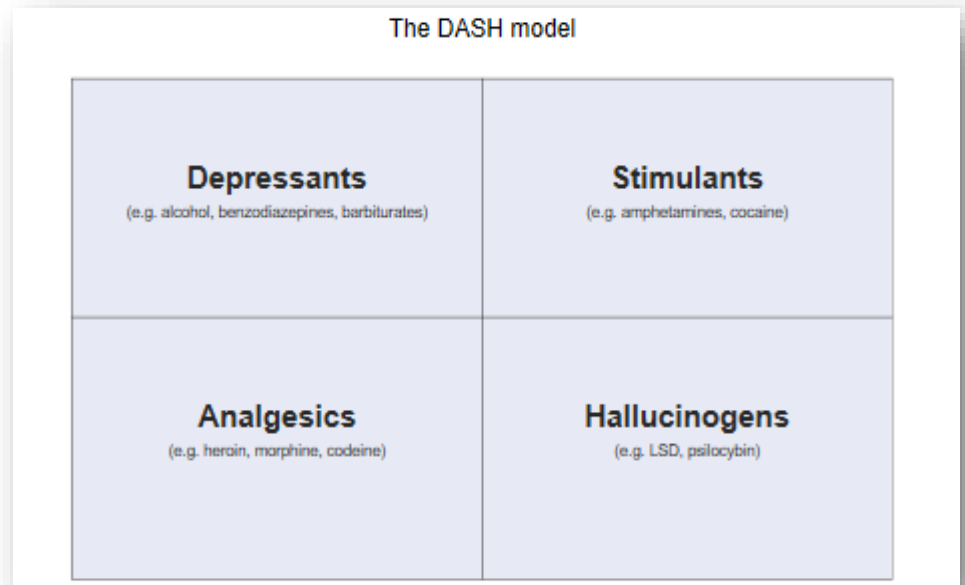

Especially, I would like to introduce the Drug Wheel and its brief development history

“three additional categories in the updated DASH Model.”

1. Until the latter part of the 20th century, the pharmacological literature classified the active ingredients of psychoactive plants as sedatives, stimulants, or hallucinogens. However, with the development of a wide range of new drugs, it split into the DASH model.

2. By 2012 there was an increasing number of new psychoactive substances on the market that didn't fit within previous methods of drug classification. Adding three new categories and renaming Hallucinogens

Using the Drugs Wheel

The Drugs Wheel can be used as a training tool and as a game for use in training or 1:1 sessions. There are free versions of each to download on this site, as well as a range of other resources.

The Drugs Wheel game: free version

It has been trialed in various settings with young people, adult substances users and a range of professionals working in various fields such as drugs workers, teachers and social workers.
